Samples of the Handbill & Poster for the forthcoming Dharna is being published. It is an earnest appeal to the Confederation Leaders that they should get these printed and distributed.

Month-long Dharna at Parliament for reservation in the private sector

Dr. Udit Raj, N. Chairman

The achievements made by the All India Confederation of SC/ST Organizations under the leadership of Dr. Udit Raj for the welfare of Dalits and majority of other oppressed people in the country, are unparalleled. This is not just rhetoric but a matter of fact. When five anti-reservation orders were issued in the year 1997 by the Department of Personnel and Training, Govt of India, the Confederation organized country-wide movements in the years 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2000 followed by massive rallies in Delhi which led to three amendments to the Constitution. Had this not been done, issues like filling up of back-log vacancies, relaxation in departmental examinations and promotions and benefits of seniority, would have remained in the cold storage for a long time. In fact the mammoth programme on the 4th November, 2001, for conversion to Buddhism in which lakhs of people from all over the country participated was the culmination of our achievements on the reservation front which sent powerful signals not only in the country but in other parts of the world. Think of an organization or a movement whose contribution has been so unique.

Reservation in Legislative Bodies of the country at Jantar Mantar, New Delhi, from 19 Nov. to 22 Dec. 2009

Government jobs and became possible because of provisions were taken care of Constitution. Right from our reservation policy was not enforced effectively. Most of the Banks were in the hands of private business houses and these banks were nationalized during that decade on account of which Dalits started getting jobs. During this period, some Public Sector Undertakings were established by the Central and State Governments and job reservation was enforced in these Undertakings also. Thus, it will be seen that reservation policy was followed somewhat sincerely just for about 20 or 25 years i.e. from 1970 to 1990. In the decade of 1990s, the process of privatization started and picked up momentum. It is worth mentioning here that privatization started during the Congress regime under the leadership of the then Prime Minister Narasimha Rao. The number of Dalits and Adivasis as existing in the year 2000 in different Government departments and offices has gone down by two-third or half. For example, in Kanpur IIT where the number of Safai Karamcharis at one time used to be 350, it has come down to around 10. Keeping in view the increasing population and better educational standards, the number of officers and staff in every department should have gone up, but the factual position is just the reverse. Had there been awareness on the part of Dalits it is a situation of do or die. There are many prominent Dalit leaders and big organizations but they are there only to grind their own axe and for this precise reason, they are neither doing anything against privatization nor for reservation in pvt. sector. In order to live with dignity, the only course left for Dalits is to do or die. If reservation in the private sector is not introduced, the process of development for Dalits will come to a grinding halt. With a view to implement the reservation policy effectively, the UPA Government tabled a Bill for Reservation in Parliament in 2004, but it has not been passed so far. When an opportunity arose to pass this Bill in the February-March 2009 session of Parliament, it was found that there were many shortcomings in Bill. Due to this reason, the Bill could not be passed then and still it is pending. Safai Karamcharis are not getting time-bound promotions and the contract system is being widely followed due to which exploitation has further increased. Caste certificate issued by one State is not valid in another State. Due to non-existence of reservation policy in the Armed Forces and Higher Judiciary, the presence of Dalits in these services is very negligible. Lakhs of posts are lying vacant. The landless people are not getting land and Dalits are not getting any reservation in Government contracts. According to a report of the National Bureau of Crime (2006), 27070 crimes were committed against Dalits, every week, 13 Dalits were murdered, 5 houses of Dalits were set on fire, 6 Dalits were kidnapped, 3 Dalit women were raped every day, atrocities were committed against 11 Dalits every day and crimes were committed against Dalits every eighteen minutes. Since 2006, there has been a further increase in atrocities and crimes against Dalits.

It is not an easy task to organize a month-long Dharna. For achieving big goals, we have to make bigger sacrifices and launch a sustained struggle. It is obvious that lakhs of rupees will be required to carry on the movement. Thousands of committed cadres will have to work round the clock. It has been decided that every State will be charged with the responsibility of organizing one day's dharna. Representatives of large departments and the districts where the Confederation is having a strong base, can also take up the responsibility of organizing one day's dharna. Dharna will be staged from 19 November to 22 December, 2009 to coincide with the winter session of Parliament and all out efforts should be made to ensure that the local Members of Parliament, Members of Legislative Assemblies and other prominent local leaders are invited to participate in the Dharna.

UN's caste declaration riles India

The United Nations Human Rights Council's (UNHCR) recent decision to declare discrimination based on the caste system a "human-rights abuse" - thereby acknowledging centuries of bias against the world's estimated 200 million Dalits (untouchables) - has evoked a sharp reaction from India. The UN decision came about despite robust opposition from the Indian government and its aggressive lobbying to get the council to delete the word "caste" from its draft. Instead, the UNHCR is now set to ratify draft principles that recognize persecution of Dalits worldwide. No other country has opposed the move as vehemently as India. This is because the UNHCR declaration has a special relevance to India and its 65 million Dalits - the largest for any single country.

This sizeable demographic section of the people, is considered "unclean" in India by the upper castes who regard their presence, and sometimes even their shadow, as polluting. It is in this regard that the UN draft pledges to work for the "effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent". What has weakened India's case most in the UNHCR was Nepal's acquiescence to the move. Wrestling the opportunity, the council has now called on India to follow Nepal's example even as New Delhi feels this amounts to "international interference" in a sensitive internal matter.

There's no denying that the issue of Dalits - who occupy the lowest rung of India's well-entrenched caste pyramid - is a virtual tinderbox in the country. Despite India's increasing literacy levels, mounting economic wealth and growing geopolitical heft, the benefits of national prosperity haven't quite percolated down to low-caste Indians, who are ostracized by mainstream society.

Despite over six decades of independence from British rule, Dalits are still discriminated against in all aspect of life in India despite laws specifically outlawing such acts. They are the victims of economic embargos, denied basic human rights such as access to clean drinking water, use of public facilities, education and access to places of worship. Even constitutional laws, modeled on those framed by the Confederate states in America during the reconstruction period after the Civil War to protect freed black American slaves, have never been enforced by the Indian judiciary and legislature, which are dominated by high castes.

This is indeed ironic as one of this century's most recognizable global icons - Mahatma Gandhi - was an Indian who crusaded tirelessly against discrimination based on caste or gender. He ensured that the founding fathers of the Indian constitution made special provisions to grant India's Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes and other Backward Castes special privileges like reservations (up to 33%) in jobs and educational institutes.

So why is there such a hue and cry in India over the UNHCR move? According to experts, the brouhaha has as much to do with politics as with economics and human rights. First, it is not in favor of vested political interests to eliminate the caste system in India as Dalits form a lucrative vote bank. In fact, in a country of a billion-plus population, it would be foolhardy to fritter away this attractive political constituency that dominates large swaths of India.

The prime example is India's most populous state of Uttar Pradesh (population: 190 million) which has 403 electoral constituencies. Though there are no official figures available, it is estimated that the country's largest number of Dalits - probably half - reside here. The results are clear; currently the state is ruled by the powerful Dalit-dominated Bahujan Samaj Party, helmed by its redoubtable chief minister Mayawati, who was ranked by Forbes magazine in 2008 at 59 on its world's most powerful women list.

In 1995, at age 39, Mayawati was the youngest politician elected to the post of chief minister and was also the first Dalit to head a state government. She may well trail-blaze again as India's first Dalit prime minister as she goes about building an alliance with India's Brahmins, augmenting the Dalits' pan-India footprint. (In June, Meira Kumar was elected the first Dalit woman ever as parliament speaker.)

Still, there's no denying that Mayawati is more an aberration rather than the rule in India. So will the UNHCR move help get Indian Dalits' global attention followed by aid from bodies like the European Union? Dr Udit Raj of the Dalit-based Indian Justice Party has welcomed the UN move and feels it will focus the international spotlight on the issue provided the "Indian government has the courage to accept there's discrimination".

It is unlikely that a single UN resolution will radically change the landscape of social realities in India. Perhaps even the UNHCR is aware of this fact. Can its declaration be a tool to harass India then? Is it a clever ploy to keep the ambitious country on a leash in view of its abysmal human-rights record? The idea could be to push India to be answerable for discrimination based on work, descent and gender.

Some good has already come out of the UNHCR exercise, albeit indirectly. Rahul Gandhi, the architect of the ruling Congress Party's general election victory in May, has launched a recent drive to uplift Dalits. He is visiting Dalit homes across Uttar Pradesh and has ordered his party members to recalibrate their welfare programs in favor of Dalits. However, many see the Gandhian's move as a larger political game plan to erode Mayawati's base in Uttar Pradesh.

In other words, the UNHCR declaration is a sword that will cut both ways for India. While it will definitely focus international attention on the issue - and hopefully lead to increased government spending to improve opportunities for Dalits in the country - it has simultaneously underscored the country's feudalistic and discriminatory ethos. It is this that India is most sensitive about as it tries to wrest center stage in the new global regime.

Convention of IJP Delegates to be held on 14 Nov. in Delhi

Politics in the present time is deeply influenced by lack of ideology, black money and casteism. Thus, there is an urgent need for finding a powerful alternative. Prices are sky-rocketing. Privatization is taking place at a very fast pace. There is not only an increase in the atrocities against Dalits but reservation policy is also in doldrums. Under these circumstances, it has been decided to call a convention of all the national, State and district office bearers of the Indian Justice Party. The major issues which will be discussed at this convention are - strengthening the organizational base, to discuss arrangements for holding the convention at district and State levels, discussion on the membership drive, induction of BSP members who have left the Organization into the fold of the Indian Justice Party, reservation in the private sector, to ensure dignity of the place at 26, Alipore Road, where Dr. Ambedkar breathed his last and to ensure flow of funds for the organization.

This convention will be representative in nature. At your level, you invite all those people to participate in the convention who can prove to be effective workers or can provide good and active leadership. This convention will start at 10 AM on 14th November, 2009 (Saturday), at Ambedkar Bhawan, Rani Jhansi Road, Near Pasnchkuin Road, New Delhi. It is, therefore, requested that you attend the convention along with your committed and dedicated colleagues. If you have any suggestions for this convention, you are welcome to contact me over the phone.
